A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured.

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, Editor of The Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed." Sent by J. Jas. Wood & Son, Druggists.

The statistics of smallpox show that this ailment is more prevalent from January to June than in the latter half of the year. Measles show a descending curve in January, a rise in May and June, a fall from August to October, and then a rise in November and December, carrying us on to the January fall. Scarlet fever is low from January to July; it rises in August, and is high till the end of December. Typhoid fever is typically an ailment of the autumn.

Mothers who would keep their children in good health should watch for the first symptoms of worms and remove them with White's Cream Vermifuge. Price, 25 cents. J. Jas. Wood & Son.

The Lizzie Bay from Pomeroy will be down tonight.

The Henry M. Stanley will be up tonight for Charleston.

The Avalon for Pittsburgh passed up yesterday morning.

The Annie L. is coming from Pomeroy with a tow of coal.

Peter McDermott, a deckhand on the towboat H. P. Frisbie, was drowned at Mt. Vernon Monday.

J. C. Thomas of Louisa will build Lock No. 1 in the Big Sandy river, his figures being $116,455.

Many of the towboats are hitched to their tows at Pittsburgh and ready to come out on the first rise on short notice.

Sterling Bondurant, aged 85, for fifty years a Pilot between Cincinnati and Louisville, died at his home near Madison Sunday.

The boilers and machinery are ready at Cincinnati, to be placed in position on the new Boston as soon as Howard cuts the string that binds her to the bank.

It is reported that the T. P. Leathers, sunk recently in the Mississippi, will never be raised. She partially upset and went down in fifty feet of water, and it is thought her boilers were rolled overboard when she went down.

Cheap Insurance.

Many a man has been insured against fire, disease, diabetes, or other dangerous ailment by a fifty-cent bottle of Foley's Kidney Cure. Take no other. J. Jas. Wood & Son and Armstrong & Co.

GOEBELISM IN KENTUCKY!

RISE OF THE MONSTER.

Facts That Should Be Burned Into the Memory.

Louisville Evening Post, June 12.

For the first time in human history the followers of a political leader resent the application of their leader's name to the influences which emanate from him. Goebelmism has a distinct meaning; it is a manifestation which became clear as something distinct from Democracy in the Legislature of 1896.

To prevent the recently elected Legislature from choosing a Senator a combination was made between two bitter enemies, Goebel and Blackburn, and by a clearly marked course of action within the Legislature and outside a reign of terrorism was established at Frankfort. Armed men invaded not the lobbies alone, but the Legislature itself. Members were expelled from the Legislature by force, and the Speakers of each House had to appeal to the Governor for protection, which the local authorities would not or could not give.

The second chapter in the rise of Goebelmism is written in the records of the Legislature of 1898. A series of measures, revolutionary in their character and destructive of all the principles of popular government, were passed, one after the other, and the crowning act was the Election Law.

It was manifest that if a free people were permitted to pass on the acts of the Legislature of 1898 the party responsible would be swept from power. Hence, under the pretense of revising our election laws, the right of suffrage was stricken down.

With the control of the election machinery in his own hands, as he fondly believed, Mr. Goebel determined to be the Democratic nominee. That the people were against him was manifest, but he knew how to handle time-serving, office-seeking politicians, and he cared nothing for public opinion or for party revolt. He thought he had control of the election machinery, so he did not care how he got the nomination, so he got it.

These are the preliminary chapters to any history of Goebelmism as a political manifestation; the other chapters are first the proceedings prior to the election of 1899; second, the procedure in connection with the election, and third, the proceedings in connection with the contest, by which the will of the people was overthrown.

This is Goebelmism historically considered. Rising within the Democratic party, it has conquered the party, and made the organization minister to the triumph of a faction that knows nothing whatever of Thomas Jefferson or popular institutions. Yet so inextricably are Goebelmism and Democracy blended, that the first cannot be destroyed until the second is overthrown.

One more citation from these records is necessary in order to complete this picture of what we know as Goebelmism in Kentucky. Mr. Watterson does not like the phrase, though we believe he coined it. Now he says "It is the merest sound and fury, signifying nothing." He says to use it is a violation of the sanctity of the tomb, and that any man who applies it to the Democratic party "Should be spotted as a thief and a villain."

That, doubtless, was written in a fit of delirium tremens; but that the public may have some more definite idea of what is meant by Goebelmism, we turn to the columns of The Courier-Journal.

"The Goebel Law," said Mr. Watterson, "will absolutely disfranchise every voter in the state, at the will of two out of three men sitting at Frankfort, with unlimited authority over every election officer in Kentucky, and responsible to no power of the people, reserved or delegated."

This Central Board refused to exercise the power conferred, because there were on it two lawyers who held political necessities second to professional integrity. But they were assailed with such violence and vehemence because of this refusal that they resigned, and Poyntz has the Board in working order again.

Mr. Watterson rightly described the board as "an autocratic tribunal, foreign to and fatal to the democratic theory of Government."

It was in this article that Mr. Watterson connected the passage of the act with the political purposes of its author, Mr. Goebel. He indicts it because it is "an invention devised in the temporary interest of personal and factional advancement; as a measure which, always and wholly partisan, would place the electoral machinery of the state at the absolute mercy of whatever boss or junta that should be able to secure control of the machinery of the dominant party."

That purpose to control the machinery of the dominant party was clearly written in the bill. Mr. Watterson exposed and denounced it. It was carried out, nevertheless, by the influence of the police, the degradation of Judge Redwine, and the betrayal of Captain Stone.

One year after the prophecy of Mr. Watterson, the author of this bill did seize the machinery of the dominant party, ground out a nomination for himself and demanded Mr. Watterson's unconditional surrender. Mr. Watterson surrendered at discretion and at once turned his batteries on his old friends. He notified Mr. Belmont that all element of chance or choice had been eliminated from elections in Kentucky, and that an alliance, offensive and defensive, could not too soon be made with Mr. Goebel.

In the light of these facts, let the people of Kentucky read this Wattersonian prophecy of March 7 and see what faith they can put in his arguments and his eulogiums of today:

"What matter who is Governor, if Kentucky is to be shorn of sovereignty? What matter what party is dominant if the franchise be struck down? What matter if who hold the offices and draw the salaries if the only right left to the citizen be the right to pay taxes without even a voice as to where they shall go or by whom they shall be collected?"

These words are as true, as patriotic, today as they were in 1898. Events have illustrated them and illumined them, but the hand that wrote them holds today another pen, dipped in gall and bitterness. It is a mercenary pen.

and it has lost its power to mislead. But when The Courier-Journal tries to dim the issue, tries to secure amnesty under the plea of granting amnesty, thus to induce the liberty loving people to surrender their destinies to him as a year ago he tried to have the L. and N. put in his care and keeping, the people will recall the past and taking courage from the present move on to the overthrow of Goebelmism and all that Goebelmism implies, as a condition precedent to the re-establishment of self-government in Kentucky.

C. H. WHITE & CO.

Mr. White went to Cincinnati a few days ago to have his eyes operated on, but his physician concluded it was not advisable at present, so he has decided to sell out and quit business.

He will sell any or all the houses he owns in Maysville—some at cost and some below cost, and on from one to five years time, deferred payments to bear 5 per cent. interest.
